Teachers Hear Live Topics Discussed at Sixty-Seventh Annual Institute

Meetings Prove Highly Instructive And Entertaining.

DIRECTORS IN SESSION

Under circumstances so favorable as to radiate good cheer in all directions, the sixty-seventh annual session of the Centre County Teachers' Institute convened in the Court House on Monday, the especially well arranged program having its closing numbers today and tonight. The attendance of teachers is gratifyingly large, and the attention to the instructive remarks at the several lectures has been so marked as to elicit the favorable comment of the public. Likewise, the evening entertainments have been first class. Even the Weather Man became imbued with the spirit of the occasion and gave the teachers an exceptionally delightful week for their annual visit to Bellefonte.

The initial session was called to order on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, County Superintendent D. O. Etters cordially greeting the teachers in a few well chosen and happily phrased remarks. From that moment the week became a busy one, although each day has been so well featured that the hours passed only too quickly. Following the opening remarks by Superintendent Etters, there was singing conducted by Professor Clarence C. Robinson, of State College, and then Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, pastor of the Reformed church officiated at devotional exercises. The first lecture was by Dr. Charles C. Ellis, Dean of Juniata College, of Huntingdon, who by the way visited Bellefonte to address the teachers some years ago. The theme of his address was that the public makes itself interested in the public school more along the line of physical than mental education. The role of the teacher, he said, is to inculcute intellectuality in early life, conserve life and guard health. While instructing the child, he pointed out, the teacher should nourish in the mental, in spiritual and moral life and inspire in the child reverence for the flag.

Singing was engaged in at the conclusion of Professor Ellis' address, and then Dr. Francis H. Green, of the West Chester State Normal School, cleverly presented a few important things for teachers to know.

The common, old-fashioned interrogation, mark he said, illustratesa most important factor in instruction, namely, inquiry. The teacher should encourage the child to ask questions; likewise, the teacher should be of an inquiring mind. Carrying out this illustration, he asked, "Why do we attend Institute?" His answer was along the line that teachers attend in the interest of the child, not as a mere matter of dollars and cents. Teachers teach to get rich, not rich in finance but in marks in higher life, richer in mind. His address was indeed rich in the good thoughts conveyed, and all present greatly enjoyed the time alloted to him.

Monday evening's entertainment by the Ernest Gamble Concert Company was unquestionably one of the finest ever presented at a teachers' Institute. The music was far above the average, the bass soloes were particularly good, as were also the renditions on the violin and piano. The attendance was large and all felt glad that they were privileged to be present.

On Tuesday morning Prof. Robinson conducted the musical exercises, after which devotional services were in charge of Rev. A. F. Weaver, pastor of the Evangelical church. The Committee on Professional Reading presented its report through the chairman, Prof. B. H. Bottenhorn. It was announced that diplomas for those who had taken the course would be awarded on Wednesday morning. It was requested that teachers taking the next course hand in their names before January 14th. The committee has an unexpended balance of $50 in the treasury, and it was announced that $5 of this amount would be presented to the Institute if needed. The Committee on Resolutions, C. O. Frank Chairman, was requested to meet at an early time to make a report.

Professor Ellis was then introduced to resume his talk of the day before. He spoke on "Failures", his discussion proving to be pleasing and instructive. Not all failures are really failures, he remarked, nor are successes all successes. In other words, a failure may be such in a financial sense, and at the same time the effort may prove to be one blessed with goods things, with success, in other respects. He referred in a striking manner to Pertolotzi, the great teacher of children. He was a lover of children and started the first industrial school. It was a failure financially, but a grand success in the good that was done. He had failed in the ministry, in the law and in farming, and at the age of fifty-two years he engaged in teaching and his labors were crowned with success. Prof. Ellis emphasized the value of object teaching. The reason so many boys of the age of 10 years criticise their teachers is because at that age they remember the things they see; objects make a deep impression on their minds. Education, said Prof. Ellis, is not pouring in matter but discovering what is in the child and developing it.

Dr. Arthur Holmes, Dean of the Colleges, at State College, was next introduced, his subject being feeble-mindedness and the problems of the backward child. He referred to two classes—the unusually retarded or the advanced. The standard normal child, he said, used to be that child which entered school at the legal age and was promoted normaliy; that is promoted from grade to grade in the time normally allowed for the advancement Such, he remarked, is not necessarily the case today, meaning that a child may advance several grades in the same time devoted to a single grade years ago. Four percent of the children in the United States, he said, are permanently retarded. Permanently retarded children he placed in three groups or classes—feeble-minded, imbeciles and idiots, which may have three headings, high, middle and low, making nine in all. In every family where one of the parents is weak-minded said Dean Holmes, one of every four children is an imbecile. Feeble-minded children are easily distinguished, said Dean Holmes. They shuffle at the knees or shoulders, the skin is thin, sores appear on the body, their faces are pale, hair scanty and not clean. The shape of the head is not necessarily indicative of feeblemindedness, he added. Unually, he continued, the eyes are small and close together, the nose is not broad at the bridge, the mouth slobbers and the tongue is thick, the ears are unusually large or unusually small. An imbecile, he noted, does not pick up a pen or pencil as does another person, that is with the thumb and one or two fingers, but seizes it with the whole hand. This, he explained, is because the imbecile is lacking in the power to grasp an object. The mentally deficient child, said Dean Holmes, may have a good memory and perhaps a love for music, but he is mentally weak just the same.

Dr. Green, who had talked so interestingly on Monday, was the next speaker. He discussed books, the best kind for reading by scholar and teacher. Every teacher, he said, should have a good library and it should contain these three books, the Bible, Shakespeare and a dictionary. There are, he said, four kinds of books—1, the matured books, proved by time to be good; 2, wholesome books; 3, books of a cheerful character, and 4, books on varied subjects, such as history, science, philosophy, etc.

Singing was the next feature and then it was announced that Local Institute No. 6 would meet at 1.45 o'clock. Local Institute No. 4, it was stated, would meet Wednesday morning.

When the Tuesday afternoon session was convened H. W. Edwards, colored, representing the Smallwood Memorial Institute, addressed the teachers, briefly telling of the growth and good work done by that well known school. An offering in its behalf was lifted. Announcements for hours for meetings of Local Institutes No. 1, 2 and 3 followed, also notice was given of the time for a meeting of the Committee on Necrology. Dean Holmes then resumed his talk on the backward child, discussing a phase which he termed the temporarily retarded child, classifying such children into two groups, those retarded from the outside and those from the inside. By outside causes he meant home surroundings, etc. No child, he remarked, is retarded of his own consent. He then pointed out numerous ways for teachers to observe whether a child is temporarily retarded.

At the conclusion of Dean Holmes' talk it was announced that a meeting of Lock Haven Normal students among the teachers would be held to arrange for the banquet, which is always an interesting feature of Institute week. This year's banquet proved to be a splendid and happy success and quite in keeping with that of last year. Dr. Green then took up his talk on books, saying that beautiful poetry is the crowning glory of literature. He added that a love of poetry is no longer regarded as a sign of weak-mindedness but a sign that the mind can be applied to reading and studying poetry.

A crowded house was on hand for Ralph Parlette's lecture on "The University of Hard Knock's," on Tuesday evening. It was a lecture full of snap and it contained lots of rich humor and made a pleasing impression on the audience.

Wednesday's opening session had devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. Dr. G. E. Hawes, pastor of the Presbyterian church, after which Superintendent Pentzextended greetings from the State Department of Education, at Harrisburg. A meeting of High School principals and teachers was held in the Grand Jury room, and while this was on Dr. Ellis addressed the Institute. He paid a glowing tribute to Horace Mann, the great educator who was born in 1796 and who twice gave up positions of honor and prominence to devote himself to teaching. Dr. Green again addressed the teachers, after which Professor Jonas E. Wagner, principal of the Bellefonte schools, gave an outline of the approaching meeting of the Pennsylvania State Educational Society. The morning session was concluded with another talk by Dean Holmes, whose subject was "Characters." If you want to be happy, he said, set out to attain something you will attain and at the same time something you will never attain. The aim of the teacher, he added, is to make character in the school room.

On Wednesday afernoon announcement was made that Local Institute No. 5 would meet at 4 o'clock. Dr. Ellis then entered upon a discussion of the relationship between the school and the home, saying that the parents and teachers should work together. The teacher, he declared, should bridge the chasm between the school room and the home. Dr. Green, continuing his talk on books, said that intimate friends in life and literature are scarce. They are many acquaintances but few friends, he remarked and concluding he said that all teachers should have a few intimate friends among books. Last night the State College Quartette gave a fine concert which was greatly enjoyed by all. In the next few weeks the Penn tState Quartette will depart on a concert tour of the Canal Zone.

GOVERNOR TO APPOINT JUDGE FOR ONE YEAR

Centre County Affected by Defeat of Third Amendment.

MAY CONTINUE ORVIS

Recent Election Upset Legislation to Correct Defect by Extending Terms of Judges—Vacancy Here Jan. 1, 1915 to Jan. 1, 1916.

Governor Tener will in all likelihood be compelled to appoint a Judge of the Centre County courts to serve from January 1,1915, to January 1, 1916. All indications are that all of the proposed amendments to the constitution were defeated at last week's election, and if this is borne out by the complete returns there will be created a vacancy on the bench in this county which may be filled only by appointment by the Governor.

The third proposed amendment was one extending for one year the terms of Judges whose regular terms expire in even numbered years. Judge Orvis, in Centre County, is one of sixteen Judges in Pennsylvania affected. His term expires at the end of 1914. The constitution, as amended in 1909, provides that his successor must be elected in an odd-numbered year. Had the third amendment voted on last week been approved his term would have been extended to the end of 1915, his successor being elected in November of that year.

As matters now stand the successor to Judge Orvis cannot be elected until November, 1915, and cannot take his seat until the end of that year. Judge Orvis' term, however, will expire January 1, 1915, and the Governor will have to fill the vacancy from that date to January 1, 1916.

The appointment is too far ahead to ascertain what the Governor is likely to do in this county when called on to make an appointment. Last year a similar condition prevailed in a number of counties and the policy followed out by the Governor was that of appointing the Judges whose terms were about to expire. Should he continue that policy it would mean the appointment of Judge Orvis to serve an additional year, or just what would have resulted had the third amendment to the constitution been approved instead of defeated at the polls.

MOVEMENT UNDER WAY TO MAKE TOWN "DRY"

To File Remonstrances Against Licenses Here.

UP TO JUDGE ORVIS

May be Extended to Embrace Entire County—Headed By Pastors and Some Members of Local Churches—Looking up Petition Signers.

A movement to make Bellefonte "dry" has been launched by the pastors and some members of several of the local churches. The plans in hand, it is said, include the filing of a general remonstrance and also individual remonstrances with Judge Orvis against all applications for license in the borough. Whether the movement will be extended to embrace the entire county, has not been announced, but it is understood that it will be a subject for consideration at a meeting of the County Ministerial Association

Rev. Dr. G. E. Hawes, pastor of the Presbyterian church, made reference to the agitation for a "dry" down in his pulpit last Sunday. Next Sunday night Rev. Dr. E. H. Yocum will make the subject one for discussion in his sermon in the Methodist Episcopal church. For some weeks past representatives of the no-license movement have been closely scrutinizing applications for license filed at the Court House, particular attention being paid to the names of signers. At a meeting held recently to map out plans for conducting the proceedings when remonstrances are filed, Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt was named as chairman of a committee to retain counsel. Rev. C. C. Shuey was named as chairman of another committe. It is not improbable that some out-of-town lawyer will be retained to handle the remonstrances.

Present licenses will not expire until April 1st, next. License court will be held in January, at which time the proposed fight for a "dry" town will be carried before Judge Orvis, however.

FEW DEER SHOT

Some Camps Report Fair Luck—No Word Received from Others.

An unexpected but good tracking snow ushered in the hunting season for deer on Monday and scores of hunters are camped in the mountains. Thus far but the most meagre reports have come in from the camps, and these tell of comparatively few deer being shot. Some of the camps are located so far from points of communication that no reports are looked for until the hunters return at or toward the close of the season.

The Decker party from Pine Grove Mills, quartered in Decker valley in the Seven Mountains, landed a fine buck on Monday and have it hanging in camp. Members of this party on Tuesday reported to Sheriff Lee that an unknown hunter had shot a doe and that they had the same in camp. Sheriff Lee and District Attorney Fortney went to Decker valley and brought back the doe, later presenting it to the Bellefonte hospital. The killing of this doe is the first violation of the law reported thus far.

Frank Mattern, the WarriorsMark merchant, killed a big buck in Spruce Creek on Monday morning.

The Woodward party, camped in Pine Creek hollow, landed a buck on the opening day.

Three cub bears were killed near Woodward by several young men. A young man named Wolf, chauffeur for Dr. C. S. Musser, of Aaronsburg, shot two of the three. They could not locate the mother bear.

The Gettig-Gentzel party is camped about 12 miles from Karthaus, too far from railroad or telephone for any report as to results. The Panthers, also from Bellefonte, are camped in the Alleghenies. They have not reported.

Two bucks are reported killed by a crew camping on the headwaters of Rattlesnake Run.

The Dukeman-Confer party, from Curtin, are camping in the Baker Run district. The Zimmerman-Krape party, from Hecla, are quartered in the same district.

Several bucks have been killed near Farrandsville. Luke Cryder and Archie Philips landed one. The McHenry party also got one. The Waltz party killed a three-pronged buck near Caldwell. Robert Condon, of Chathams Run, shot a 350-pound black bear in the mountains north of that place. Postmaster Robert D. Peck, of Lock Haven, shot a buck on the opposite side of the river from West port.

The Chambers—Uzzle party, of Snow Shoe, in camp some distance from that place, report three nice bucks shot since Monday.

The Centre Hall party, of which Register Frank Smith is a member, in camp in the Seven Mountains, report one buck killed.

The Gamble-Gheen building, occupied by the Lauderbach-Barber Co. and the Bellefonte Shirt Factory, is resplendent in a fresh coat of paint.

M. J. Goodheart, Centre Hall Farmer, Ends Life While Temporarily Deranged

Former Resident of Hublersburg Blows Out Brains.

HAD DOMESTIC TROUBLE

While temporarily deranged, Miller J. Goodheart shot and killed himself at his home nearby Centre Hall about 8.30 o'clock Monday morning. The unfortunate man, who was about 43 years old, had been failing mentally for several months. He was a son of the late Samuel Goodheart and was born and raised near Hublersburg. With his mother he moved to near Centre Hall snortly after his father's death some years ago. He leaves a widow, formerly Miss Lettie Ross, and three children. H. R. Goodheart, one of the children, is teacher of the Penn Hall school in Gregg Township. He was at the railroad station to come to Bellefonte for the Teachers' Institute when he received word of his father's tragic death. He immediately returned to his home.

The facts attending the suicide as gleaned by "The Republican" are that Miller Goodheart had been brooding over domestic troubles, real or imaginary, and several weeks ago he threatened to shoot either himself or members of his family. He had not been living with his family for a number of months, staying with neighbors and at other times buying things to eat at stores at Spring Mills and other places in that section. He,however carefully attended to his work on the farm, getting in the crops, etc. About ten days ago he returned to his home. Whether old troubles were revived is not known, but on Monday morning, a few minutes after his son departed for Bellefonte, he went into an outer kitchen, or wash-house, and whipping out a revolver shot himself through the head. He died almost instantly.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Little Girl's Clothing Ignited by Bonfire in Back Yard.

Margaret, the 8-years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Murphy, of East Lamb Street, was so frightfully burned while playing near a bonfire at the rear of her home last Friday evening that she died a short time after being removed to the Bellefonte hospital. The circumstances surrounding the child's death are especially sad.

Mrs. Murphy had been engaged in house-cleaning during the day and along toward evening she started a fire in the back yard to dispose of some old paper, etc. She cautioned her little daughter and one or two other children not to venture near the fire and then stepped into the home of a neighbor.

Not realizing her danger Margaret got too close to the fire and a sharp gust of wind swept the flames against her dress. In an instant her clothing was burning, the fire doing the worst damage to her back and one arm. Her screams attracted the attention of Albert Schad, who was working on a plumbing job on East Linn Street. Dropping his tools he ran to the Murphy home. When he reached there he wrapped his coat about the little girl, whose clothing by that time was covered with flames. He carried her into her parents' home and telephoned for an automobile to have her removed to the hospital. The child suffered considerably during the night, death relieving her about 5 o'clock Saturday morning.

TOOK POISON TABLET

Mill Hall Man Swallowed Bi-Chloride Mercury—May Die.

William Young, aged 40 years, is critically ill at his home at Mill Hall, having swallowed a bi-chloride of mercury tablet last Saturday night. The attending physicians are hopeful that he will recover, but are unwilling to make any predictions. Comparatively few cases are known where recovery has followed the taking of the deadly poison and Young's case is being watched with the greatest interest.

While standing with a companion in front of the Hotel Clinton late Saturday night, Young took the tablet which may cause his death. His companion took three tablets from his pocket and was showing them to Young when the latter picked up one, dropped it into his mouth and the next instant swallowed it. His companion, horrified by Young's foolhardy act, explained that the tablet was rank poison and the two went to the office of Dr. A. B. Painter. The latter was not is so they proceeded to Coffey's drug store, only to find it closed for the night. By this time both men were thoroughly frightened and they went to the hotel. There Young swallowed four raweggs as an emetic, which failed to bring up the poison. Bystanders then succeeded in having him swallow the whites of fourteen additional eggs, and Young then experienced severe vomiting. Subsequently Dr. Painter took charge of Young. An analysis of the urine showed that the poison had reached the kidneys. Yesterday Young's condition was said to be extremely critical, his body showing indications of becoming rigid. He retains consciousness, suffers considerable pain and apparently fully realizes the gravity of his condition.

A CORRECTION

Rumored Elopement Last Week Proved to be Merely a Rumor.

Ogden Malin and Miss Helen Hurley have been having quite a lot of fun at the expense of their friends, or to be more exact, those friends who were taken in by the rumored elopement last week. "The Republican" frankly owns up to being among those fooled by the rumor, which was published in this paper last week in good faith and only after personal inquiry had been made over the phone at the home of Miss Hurley's parents.

The facts are that Mr. Malin and Miss Hurley have been and are good friends. Mr. Malin, who is located in Altoona, came home to vote, planning to return to Altoona on the afternoon train. Miss Hurley had planned departing on the same train for Pittsburgh, to visit with an aunt in that city. Mr. Malin boarded the 4.44 train at the station here. Miss Hurley went to Milesburg in Hallie Jacobs' automobile and boarded the train at that place. That started the rumor of the elopement. Mr. Malin left the train at Altoona, and Miss Hurley continued to Pittsburgh. That is all there was to it, but once the elopement rumor got started it spread quickly and soon was known throughout the town. Since there wasn't any wedding all congratulations and best wishes are out of order and those we so generously extended are accordingly withdrawn.

The ladies of the United Brethren church will hold an oyster supper in the basement of the church on Thursday evening, November 20th. All are cordially invited.

CLOSE ELECTRIC DEAL

Clearfield Syndicate Takes Over Plant of Bellefonte Electric Co.

On Friday afternoon of last week the deal for the purchase of the Bellefonte Electric Co. was closed and the plant formally taken over by the Moshannon Electric Co. The purchasing company is in reality the Clearfield syndicate which has formed the State-Centre Electric Co.

For the present the management of the plant of the Bellefonte Electric Co. will remain unchanged. In the near future, however, five companies owned by the Clearfield syndicate, including the plant in Bellefonte and that at State College, will be merged into one company, all under one management. The name of the local company will then be changed to the State-Centre Electric Co.

As soon as new machinery may be secured it will be installed in the Bellefonte plant and the system changed from direct current to alternating current. Eventually a new street lighting system will be installed in Bellefonte.

Ultimately power for the Bellefonte plant and also that at State College will be transmitted from a central station near Moshannon. For the present electric current will be generated at local plants. Wires for the transmission of current have been extended from the State College plant as far as Lemont. Next spring the wires will be extended to Bellefonte, along the site of the new penitentiary and Pleasant Gap on the proposed route. From Bellefonte the wires will be extended to Milesburg and Unionville. Franchises have been granted the company in these towns. It is also proposed extending the wires from the State College plant to Pine Grove Mills.

Ex. Senator John S. Fisher, of Indiana, is a member of the syndicate which has extended its operations into this territory. He is identified with a number of large corporations. Following the death of the late Congressman Olmsted, of Harrisburg, Senator Fisher was named as general counsel in Pennsylvania for the New York Central Railroad.

Official Vote for Township Candidates.

The official count of the vote in Centre County at the election on Tuesday, November 4th, showed no material changes in the results as based on the unofficial returns and published in "The Republican" last week. For Superior Court Judge John W. Kephart was high man in the county, having 484 over Grim. Dr. John Sebring was elected Coroner on the Democratic ticket with 239 plurality, due to the division of the Republican vote between Dr. S. M. Huff, on the Republican ticket, and Dr. M. J. Locke, on the Washington ticket. Jury Commissioners Hasel and Decker, Democratic and Republican, respectively, were re-elected. The $50,000,000 road loan was defeated in the county by 836 majority. In fact, all five proposed constitutional amendments were badly defeated. The official count for the county was as follows:

JUDGE OF SUPERIOR COURT.

Alcorn	553

Centre County Teachers are in Session.

Monday morning's trains brought the first delegations of teachers to town. Bald Eagle Valley trains were late and a number of teachers from the upper part of the valley remained at home until the noon train. Hotels and boarding houses were soon filled to capacity. Hotel accommodations had been reserved weeks and weeks ahead and quite a few teachers who had failed to make reservations in advance applied in vain for rooms when they arrived on Monday.

Centre County's teachers are a group of fine looking, healthy men and young women. The personnel includes some teachers with interesting records. One of the most unique, perhaps, is that of William T. Winkleblech, who is is in attendance at Institute. He got his schooling in the Pine Creek school, in Haines township. Subsequently he became teacher of that same school. That was twenty-six years ago, and he has been teaching the Pine Creek school ever since. Mr. Winkleblech seems to have a fashion for holding on to things. Even more than twenty-six years ago he was elected Township Auditor, and he has served in that capacity continuously from that time down to the present.

Another unique record is that of Miss Nannie Delaney, of Milesburg. She has been engaged in primrry grade teaching for thirty years or more.

Professor H. C. Rothrock, principal of the Port Matilda High School, is among the teachers in town for the week. He is one of the best known men and ablest instructors in Centre County. He is from Boalsburg.

Professor Milford Pletcher, another well known instructor in town this week, has charge of the Howard High School. Professor Gardner is especially fond of hunting. While not so tall as some hunters he has more perseverance than lots of others and when it comes to a long tramp through the mountains he is never found in the rear rank.

W. Scott Holter is another well known teacher in town for Institute. He teaches the Quay school, in Curtin township, and is well and favorably known all through the Bald Eagle valley and especially so in his home section. His son William is also a teacher in Curtin Twp.

Miss Leora Harshberger, is one of the delegation from the Port Matilda schools. She is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. S. U. Harshberger and has made an enviable record as a teacher.

Professor S. S. Williams, principal of the Liberty Township High School, is greeting friends in town this week. The Milesburg contingent of teachers is headed by Miss Laura C. Smith, principal of the High School. The Scotia delegation includes Miss Ruth Farber, daughter of William Farber, of that place. In the delegation from College Township is Miss Miriam Dreese, a daughter of Irvin J. Dreese, of Lemont. Miss Viola Burwell, teacher of the Glades school in Ferguson Township, is in attendance at the daily sessions. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Burwell.

H. Frank Reed, teacher of the Upper Branch school in the same township, is also with the Ferguson delegation.

W. C. Thompson, teacher of the Pletcher school in Liberty Township, is greeting his numerous friends in town while attending Institute.

Numerous and delightful little social functions have contributed to the pleasures of the week.

To the Citizens of Bellefonte.

A walk on Water Street between High and Lamb Streets at ten o'clock of a week-day morning impressed one thought on my mind most forcibly. Tennyson never would have written "The Brook" had he had the Bellefonte creek for his inspiration. Of all deplorable streams of water—I beg your pardon, Bellefonte's creek at ten o'clock of a week-day morning is not a stream of water. It's little more than a mud-hole with its natural amount of rocks and its unnatural amount of rubbish donated by the citizens of Bellefonte and vicinity.

Statistics are a bore but I'm going to give you a near-official count of just what I did see in Bellefonte's creek. One round dozen barrels. You notice I say one round dozen barrels, not one dozen round barrels, for they were no longer round. They were in all stages of decomposition. One or two of them were making a brave effort at rotundity but most of them had lost ambition and had permitted their staves to fall out. Some of them had given up the ghost entirely and were lying with their staves supine in the mud, and their wire hoops standing bravely up, in hopes of a festoon of rags, papers, or weeds. There were dozens of boxes, wooden and pasteboard, in all stages of decay; several crates with water-soaked straw still in them; tin cans shiny and tin cans rusty; an old bucket here and there; old brooms, broken bottles, remnants of bed-springs, pieces of old furniture, bits of crockery, some rags of horse blankets and other rubbish of unknown variety. Right in the centre was a mysterious package about four foot by two, neatly wrapped in heavy paper and tied with heavy twine. Just what this package contained I am unable to state, but when time and water get in their work these treasures will be brought to view and be added to the museum of relics now on exhibition in our beautiful (?) stream.

However, there is one good thing about it all and that is this: it is an ever-changing scene. What is to-day is not to-morrow; for as we are given a little water from the mill race or Providence sends showers, so the scene shifts. The familiar object moves on to its neighbor's place, but something just as unique and sometimes more antique comes down stream to take its place.

I have often read of "Barns bursting with plenty", but when I raised my eyes from the creek and beheld the rear of—well, it was bursting all right but there was no association of prosperity with the bursting therof. In direct opposition to the rear of this barn was the rear of a certain Supply Company's yards which are as neat as the front of any house in town. This demonstrates, it seems to me, the fact that all such places can be made clean and neat.

From the tracks of the Central Railroad to the bridge of the creek was practically clear of rubbish, for there seems to be much more water just along there. But I was surprised to find the bank of the creek at the Central Station strewn with rubbish and branches of trees with an accumulation of old bricks, ashes, paper-roofing etc. I wondered if filling in is going on there.

Going up the east side of the street I was asked in letters three feet high—and a picture of the gentleman himself—to smoke Bull Durham, also in equally emphatic way to get my clothes at a certain store, and very modestly was asked to attend the Centre County Fair. Perhaps many would be willing to adopt severe cures for extreme cases and would be willing to obey these commands if, by so doing, they might destroy the necessity for these signboards which are a blot upon the landscape.

In an article on advertising, Hugh Chalmers said that businesses sometimes advertised themselves the wrong way, sometimes unconsciously just as people do. It seemed to me that there was an apt relation in this to a town and that Bellefonte unconsciously advertises herself. An individual may attract our attention but cannot hold our admiration unless there is harmony in the toilette. A pair of rundown heels may spoil an otherwise charming appearance. Would it be too much to say that our unsightly stream and alleys and other places are Bellefonte's rundown heels? Of what part of Bellefonte's costume is the creek? Perhaps it would be better to say that it is one of her physical attractions made unattractive and ugly by neglect and abuse. The old saying, "Man proposes, God disposes" is turned around when we think of our creek, for with it it is, God's proposal, Man's disposal, It seems to me that a paramount issue in our town is the cleaning of the creek and the devising of some way to keep it clean, free from disgusting accumulations of rubbish.

A CITIZEN.

A Scientific Experiment

With a View to Demonstrating the Nature of Love

By F. A. MITCHEL

Notwithstanding that every effort has been made recently to prevent a certain scientific discovery, or, rather, its application, from being known to the public, it has leaked out and is producing a great deal of talk. We are happy to announce that a reporter of this paper got wind of what has been going on and by diligence has ferreted the matter out. A part of the story comes from a private gentleman, Mr. Samuel Higginbotham; a part from investigators in the Institute For Original Research, while the rest is made up from various persons connected with one of the most remarkable scientific wonders the world has ever seen. This is the story as constructed from the material at hand:

One bright morning Mr. Higginbotham entered the reception room at the Institute For Original Research and sent in a card to Dr. Carrelton. When the doctor appeared Mr. Higginbotham said:

"Doctor, I am not a scientific man, but I have been thinking on some of the results obtained by your experiments, and I have come to believe that a certain something I wished produced is possible."

"Be seated, sir," was the response.

The two sat down, and Dr. Carrelton gave his visitor his attention.

"As you are aware," Mr. Higginbotham proceeded, "this is an age of interest in human beings physically and scientifically considered. A few years ago the great Edison asserted that memory was a camera by which events are photographed on plates to be called up at will. Then came another scientist proposing a possible clew to determining sex by watching plants, and lastly a president of the Association For the Advancement of Science has indicated that the immortality of the soul may be proved scientifically.

"The especial branch of these discoveries to which I would direct your attention is the photographic nature of the human brain. Thirty years ago a single photograph of an object was taken; now a quick succession of pictures of a moving object passed before the eye gives motion. By the development of this principle photographic plays are enacted on the mimic stage. Likewise infinitely delicate photographs on the human brain produce impressions which make up our relations with the outside world."

Mr. Higginbotham paused and then added sententiously, "In other words, photo plays are enacted on the same principle as those of human life."

Dr. Carrelton's attention changed from indifference to interest. "I don't know," he said, "that the matter ever occurred to me in exactly that light."

"My object in seeking this interview," resumed Mr. Higginbotham, "is not to enunciate a thought, but to consult with you on the application of a principle. I have accumulated a large fortune, sir, and desire to transmit it to my descendants. I have one child, a son, but he has met with a misfortune in the loss of a girl he loved and has vowed that he will never marry. He eschews women's society, nourishing his love for the dead through a picture of her when she lived. On account of his celibacy, at his death the fortune that I have spent years of toil in heaping up must be disintegrated."

The speaker paused. Dr. Carrelton said that he did not understand the connection between his enunciation of a principle and this disappointment in his son's celibacy, whereupon Mr. Higginbotham proceeded.

"My son's love I do not consider in the nature of romance, but a material condition. Indeed, today since the death of the object it is reduced to a matter of memory. No more mental photographic pictures of her are imprinted on his brain; instead of photographic action, so to speak, there is photographic sameness, just as before the moving we had but a single immovable picture."

"I think I begin to get your drift," said Dr. Carrelton. "What you propose is to start again the life pictures on your son's brain, producing impressions which may tend in another direction."

"Exactly!" exclaimed the visitor, evidently much pleased at being understood.

"And you would like me to invent a process by which this may be done?"

"That was my object in calling upon you, sir."

"H'm," said the scientist thoughtfully. "You have given me a problem to solve which I believe will one day be solved, but I fear that I am not now up to the work. However, I will think it over and if I hit upon any method worth the trying I will advise you."

The visitor departed, leaving his address, but owing to the difficulty of the problem he had left for solution he had but little hope of the scientist's success. He heard nothing from Dr. Carrelton for several months, then received a note inviting him to call on him at the institute. When the two were again together the doctor said:

"I have been unable to dismiss from my mind the problem you offered me. Various plans have suggested themselves for accomplishing your object. To change the impressions on your son's mind from one who is dead to one who lives must be effected, if at all, in one of two ways—first, a new woman may be introduced to make him forget his dead love for her."

"Impossible," said Mr. Higginbotham. "He will have nothing to do with any woman."

"The other alternative is to find a woman—not unlike his dead love—give an artist a likeness of both the dead and the living, have him paint a number of portraits showing a gradual transition of the features of the dead to those of the living and substitute these pictures, one after another, in place of the one through which your son nourishes his love."

"Solved!" exclaimed Mr. Higginbotham, grasping the scientist's hand enthusiastically.

"Not so fast. You must remember that it is not a face or figure that alone produces love; there are many idiosyncrasies that combine to that end. While the photographic impressions on your son's brain may be gradually replaced by another combination it does not follow that the individuality we call soul will be able to charm him."

"We may at least make the experiment."

"Yes, we may do that, and there is a reasonable expectation that if we are successful in effecting the substitution of physical features in your son's brain he may fall in with the other differences under the influence of another mental faculty."

"That is?"

"The imagination."

"The imagination?"

"Yes. Let your son once be introduced to the living woman whose features through the portraits have replaced on his brain those of the dead, and he will be so pleased that he will imagine the living possesses the charms which he admired in the dead."

"Professor," exclaimed Mr. Higginbotham, "I have read of your scientific victories published to the world, but I never thought that I should be the humble instrument of drawing forth one of the most remarkable of them all."

"You are showing the importance of one of the faculties I have mentioned," remarked the doctor coolly.

"What one?"

"The imagination. No sooner do I suggest a method of procedure than you imagine the work to be accomplished. You may overcome the obstacles that are to be expected, but I fear you will not."

"Leave that to me. I shall leave no stone unturned to accomplish my purpose. I shall proceed with all the care, exactness and delicacy that you scientists practice in your own experiments."

Grasping Dr. Carrelton's hand and squeezing it so that the scientist cried out with pain, the enthusiastic Higginbotham took his departure.

It was not long after this that Albert Higginbotham, standing before the picture of his dead love, noticed a slight change, it being fresher looking than before. He spoke to his father about the matter and was told that he had sought to please his son by calling in a picture cleaner to take the dirt off it. Occasionally thereafter Albert fancied he saw some change in his picture, but was not sure. During a year a dozen pictures were substituted. In the twelfth little remained of the features of the dead; indeed, it was a portrait of Miss Anna Scarsdale, a living person.

Mr. Higginbotham, Sr., had found this young woman somewhat resembling his son's dead love after a long search. He had interested her in his plan concerning his son, and she had consented to lend herself for the experiment. But she did not consent if it were successful to marry Albert. She was well off in her own right and disposed to marry only for love.

After her own portrait had taken the place of the one worshiped by young Higginbotham, one day when he was at home she called on his father ostensibly on a matter of business. Albert saw her as she passed out and was paralyzed with astonishment. Hastening to his father, he inquired who she was and, taking him to the supposed picture of the girl he had lost, exclaimed:

"Can it be possible?"

"What possible?"

"That there was some mistake—that Edith lives."

"No, my dear boy. This young lady is not Edith. She is Miss Scarsdale, a very estimable person."

"Where can I find her?"

"Do you wish to know her?"

"Indeed, I do."

"Very well. We will have her to dinner."

"Tomorrow—today?"

"Tomorrow if she is disengaged."

Dr. Carrelton that afternoon received a visit from Mr. Higginbotham, who took the doctor in his arms in a bear hug and nearly crushed the life out of him.

"Success!"

"Success?"

"Yes. My son has seen the living woman, and she will dine with us tomorrow. You must come to the wedding."

"If it takes place."

It did take place within a few months. Albert Higginbotham married Anna Scarsdale, and the match turned out a very happy one.

This is probably the first case in which the material constitution of love has been scientifically proved. Parents with sons and daughters who persist in making unfortunate marriages should be encouraged to hope that their children's unions may be guided scientifically.

Choosing the Easier Way.

"I thought you were going to invest your money in stocks?"

"I did think of it."

"Have you changed your mind?"

"Yes. I went into a broker's place the other day for the purpose of watching the market a little while. Have you ever been in a broker's office?"

"Yes."

"Then you know the layout. There is a big blackboard upon one of the walls. At each side of the room there are tickers. Facing the blackboard are several rows of chairs, which are occupied by men who have bought or sold. They sit there, nervously chewing their cigars and watching the quotations as they are written on the blackboard."

"What has that to do with your decision not to invest?"

"After watching these watchers for awhile and studying their expressions I decided that it would be easier to go on working for the money I'm going to need."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mirabeau as an Orator.

No one, not even Talleyrand, could approach Mirabeau as a speaker, and, curiously enough, this violent, emotional man was, as orator, perfectly self possessed:

"During the debate on the disturbances at Marseilles the Right interrupted his speech with cries of slanderer, liar, scoundrel, assassin. He stopped for a moment and looked at the excited members who were bespattering him with their vile words: 'I am waiting, gentlemen,' he said, 'for these amenities to die down.' Then he went on with his speech at the point where he had broken off."

His face, pitted with smallpox, was ugly, says the author of "Mirabeau," but his very ugliness, transformed by the play of his countenance, was marvelously turned into a source of power. When he shook his "terrible boar's head" he was terrifying and no man dared to interrupt him.

Meerschaum and the Turks.

Meerschaum used to be considered a mere curiosity by the Turks, who had no other use for it than as a substitute for fuller's soap. The story runs that the Turkish ambassador at the Austrian court, in the eighteenth century, was a native of Eski Scheir. Wanting to help his city at a time of great poverty, he took a sample of this queer stuff to Vienna, thinking that the "Franks," as all foreigners were then called, might have some use for it. The Germans were quick to see its utility for pipe bowls, but declared that it was good for nothing else. More than a century has confirmed this judgment, for who has yet discovered any other use for meerschaum? For pipe making it is an ideal raw material. Here is a stone which is easily moulded when wet, and when dry becomes hard and resists fire.

Between Governors.

When the late Senator Bob Taylor was governor of Tennessee he received a letter from an inmate of the Missouri state penitentiary. His correspondent pleaded that his name, too, was Taylor; claimed kinship with the governor and begged him to use his influence with Governor Francis of Missouri to obtain a pardon. A short time afterward Governor Francis received the following letter from Governor Bob:

My Dear Governor Francis—You've got a fellow over there in your penitentiary named Taylor, who says he's kin to me and wants me to help him get out. I wish, if you see your way clear toward doing it, you would turn him loose, and if any of your kinfolks ever get in my pen I'll return the favor.

The Scot's Consolation.

He was a frugal Scot, and when the collection plate came round he dropped in a florin in mistake for the humble copper. Speedily discovering his mistake, however, he stepped softly down the aisle and requested the collector to give him back the coin, which request was politely but firmly refused. A shade of disappointment flitted o'er the northerner's face as he walked slowly back to his pew. "Aweel," he said, "it's a loss, but there's some sma' consolation in reflectin' it's a bad one. It might have got me into trouble anywhere else."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Constructively "She."

In a well known college for women where the faculty consists chiefly of the gentler sex a meeting of the academic council was in progress. Here and there a lone man sat islanded in the concourse of learned ladies. An amendment had just been proposed.

"Where is the person who offers this amendment?" inquired the president. "Who is she?"

Whereupon Mr. Flower, the popular young professor of a favorite subject, rose and replied deprecatingly, "I am she."—Youth's Companion.

Old Age a Paradox.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, discussing old age at a dinner in New York, smiled pensively and said:

"Old age is not so sad as youth deems it. Old age is a paradox. It may be truly said that the best years of a man's life come after the best years of his life have been wasted."

Paid Last Personal Tax.

Centre County made its last payment of personal property tax to the state last week, and next year and thereafter such tax will be levied for county purposes only, under the provisions of the act of 1913. For years personal property has been one of the lucrative sources of revenue for the state, as it retained one-fourth of the tax, three fourths being returned to the county where it originated. Last year the gross tax paid was between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, three-fourths being returned.

The auditor general's department at Harrisburg, is engaged in shipping several tons of blanks for reports of corporations on capital stock for the close of the present capital stock tax year. Close to 24,500 corporations will receive such blanks and must make returns to the auditor general for assessment of taxes.

Templeton Seeks Pardon.

Former State Senator Chambers O. Templeton, of Tyrone, now serving a term in the Western Penitentiary for embezzlement, is seeking a pardon. His sentence will expire next January. It has been rumored that Templeton is among the prisoners now engaged at the new penitentiary nearby Bellefonte and that his work is of a clerical nature. He is asking for a pardon so that he may leave the State and start anew in some other locality. His application sets forth that he has been adequately punished.

A State demonstrator will be at each demonstration, and the program will be carried out as announced, rain or shine.

Directors Meet.

The annual meeting of the Centre County Directors' Association was held on Wednesday. Professor Pentz, of Harrisburg, State High School Inspector, gave an interesting talk on the new policy of HighSchool work. Dean Holmes told of the great work of the country schools. Others who spoke included Dr. Bitner, of Centre Hall, and Dr. Locke, of Bellefonte. These officers were elected: H. A. Meyer, Rebersburg, president; T. I. Mairs, State College, vice president; Chas. TWO FOOTBALL GAMES

Clearfield High School Tomorrow—State Freshmen Saturday.

Two bang-up football games are scheduled for Bellefonte this week. Both will be played on the old Hughes athletic field.

Tomorrow afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, Clearfield High School will play Bellefonte High School. This will undoubtedly be one of the greatest games in which the local High School team will figure during the season. As we have pointed out on several occasions, Bellefonte High School has a rattling, good team this year. The boys are fast and put up a good exhibition of team work. Clearfield High School also has a much better eleven than the average school team and a close, exciting game may be expected. Admission 25c.

On Saturday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the Penn State freshmen will play the Bellefonte Academy, and that means a clash of the most spectacular character. Penn State will come to town with about 500 members of the freshman class, and there will be all kinds of doings at the game. Neutral officials have been engaged for the occasion and both teams will enter the game with a clear understanding that neither is to leave until the final whistle. The Academy has rounded to nicely from the bruises of the Kiski game of last Saturday and a fast, exciting contest is assured. Admission 25c.

D. P. Henderson and son, Charles, were here Saturday in quest of fresh cows. The elder Henderson is a Civil war veteran and received his baptism of fire at Antietam. He is quite sprightly for his age.

Walter W. Weaver disposed of his steam thresher outfit to a colony of Branch farmers, who were in the market for an engine but made a close purchase.

S. E. Weber and sister, Annie, are visiting their brother, Peter in Huntingdon, the last few days.

Sunday's all-day rain slowly turned to snow and the temperature dropped 30 degrees in four hours. The first day's hunting season had tracking snow and everybody that had a gun or could borrow one struck out for the woods. Frank Mattern, the WarriorsMark Wanamaker, was in great luck. With a chum he motored to old Tussey's base and they had hardly got their guns in hand when Frank sighted a 4-pronged buck and brought it down with his deadly aim. They tucked the prize into their auto and returned home in time for the noon-day meal.

Old Tussey is dotted with hunting camps. The Rileys are located at their old place. The Modocks are over in their old quarters at the Ross place. The State College Rod & Gun Club are over in the same flats with their camp. The Roosevelt Club are at their former quarters at the Hunters Springs. The Pine Grove Rod & Gun Club are in camp at the big turn on the old Ewing road. The Indiana crowd are at their bungalow. The Fleet-foots are stationed on Sand Knob. Quite a few hunters have taken quarters with nearby neighbors, returning from the woods each evening.

Blanchard.

Mrs. Mary Singer, an aged lady in our community, was attacked by a vicious cow in an alley near her home last Saturday. She was thrown to the ground with such force that one of her ankles was fractured. She was also painfully bruised. Her injuries were dressed by Dr. Kurtz, of Howard, and she is now getting along as well as could be expected. She is at the home of her sister, Mrs. George Page.

Mabel Kunes and Fay Stover are visiting with their aunt, Mrs. John Stover, in Williamsport.

Miss Mabel Page, of Orviston, spent Sunday at her home in Blanchard.

George Lingle and wife, of Panama, expect to return to their home on Monday, after a pleasant visit with their parents and friends here.

Mrs. Susan Snyder is spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. M. S. McDowell, at State College.

Paul, the little son of William Wanamaker, is ill with fever at the Williamsport hospital.

Appoint Beech Creek Man.

The County Commissioners of Clinton County have concluded to comply with the new sealers of weights and measures law. Robert W. Clark, of Beech Creek, has been appointed sealer under the new law for all of Clinton County except the city of Lock Haven. A sealer will also have to be appointed for Lock Haven. Thus far the Centre County Commissioners have not considered it necessary to appoint a sealer for this county.

Baby's Narrow Escape.

Andrew Barratt, the 3-years old son of George Barrett, of Tipton, fell into a well at his parents home one day last week and was only saved by the presence of mind of several persons who happened to be nearby. They secured a ladder and quickly brought the child to the surface. The well had a clear fall of fifteen feet to the water, which was six feet deep.

Fell from Train.

Last Friday morning while Tyrone division work train was going east near Unionville, Conductor John Woodring lost his balance and fell off while the train was running twenty-five miles per hour. He very fortunately did not fall under the wheels. His injuries consist of a broken nose and severe sprains of his neck and back. He was taken to Tyrone on the morning passenger train and his injuries attended to by Company Surgeon W. S. Musser.

How Case was Settled.

Miss Mary C. Ammerman several days ago left at "The Republican" office a statement setting forth the terms of the recent settlement of the case of Penn Chemical Co. vs. Mary C. Ammerman. The statement shows that upon payment by her of $700 an appeal to the Superior Court from judgment rendered against her in the lower court was discontinued. The incident is closed.

The Crown That Fell.

Superstitious folks find their belief in omens strengthened by an incident which occurred at the wedding of the Empress Eugenie of France many years ago. After the ceremony the emperor and his bride entered the coach, that was surmounted by an imperial crown and gilded and adorned with paintings. This coach had been built for the wedding of Napoleon I. and Marie Louise a number of decades before. Just as the coach began to move forward the crown fell from the roof of the coach to the ground. The eight horses were at once halted, the crown was picked up, and in some fashion or other set in place again. Napoleon thrust his head out of the window to learn what had caused the halt, and when informed of the accident by Count Fleury said that it reminded him of an anecdote which he would tell him some other time. "But," remarks Fleury in his memoirs, "I knew it already. A virtually identical accident occurred to the coach at the marriage of Marie Louise."

Ancient Game of Football.

Football is probably the oldest of England's national games. At Derby a game of football was played as early as the third century in commemoration of victory over the Roman legion at Chester. The first football used in the annual game—still played each Easter—is said to have been the head of a Danish invader. In the Isle of Purbeck, too, the free quarrymen from time immemorial have perpetuated their claim to a grant of land by kicking a football across it. In the fourteenth century the game was so popular as to call forth an edict forbidding it, on the ground that it interfered with the practice of more martial exercises. In later times Shakespeare referred contemptuously to the game, but perhaps few would be able to turn up readily the passage in "King Lear" describing "a base football player."—London Standard.

Chinese Porcelain.

The Chinese have a national art in the production of porcelain. Not until the time of Palissy and Wedgwood can Europe be said to have entered into rivalry with the best works of China. But an enormous difference separates the work of China and Europe. Chinese work in porcelain represents ideals, symbolic usages and perhaps allegories, which have their counterpart in the medieval stained glass to be seen in many of the oldest cathedrals. While these are religious, and attempt to embody in colors on a flat ground regardless of light and shade, but in symbolic colors, incidents in the lives of real personages or symbolic conventions associated with religious ceremonies or ideas, Chinese decorative art appeals to a sense of beauty in a manner that would have been appreciated by the ancient Greeks.

Gold Filled Wire.

Since the perfection of gold filled metal the number of spectacle and eyeglass frames and mountings made of this material has shown a very large yearly increase. Considering the importance of gold filled wire and the many uses to which it is put it seems surprising that so little is really known of this and how nearly equal to solid gold it is for many uses. The term gold filled is somewhat misleading. Merely reversing it almost thoroughly explains both the material and the process.

Filled gold, as it might well be called, consists of a gold shell filled with an alloy of base metal. The popularity of gold filled is demonstrated by the fact that nearly $1,000,000 of fine gold is used annually in one plant alone, and half of this is used in the manufacture of the gold filled wire from which spectacles and eyeglass frames and mountings are made.—American Machinist.

Gladstone and Disraeli.

It was Disraeli at the Academy banquet who said that "the noble, distinctive trait of British art was its boundless fertility in imagination and fancy." In the reaction after the banquet, as he was going home with Mr. Goschen, he "descanted on English painters and deplored their total want of fancy and imagination." Being reminded by his companion that this was not exactly what he had led people to believe was his opinion in his speech at the banquet. "No," replied Dizzy, "but, then, my friend, one must be pleasant after dinner."

Very characteristic was the comment next morning of Mr. Gladstone, who glared at the companion and roared out: "Do you mean to say that he carried his ghastly insincerity within those walls! It's hellish!"—Independent.

How a Beetle Makes Love.

The deathwatch is always destructive. In its earlier stages of life it eats up books and furniture, and when it reaches maturity the damage it does is greater still, though not so costly. In length about a quarter of an inch and of a gray color, it does not seem to be a very terrifying creature; but it has a facetious little habit of butting its armor plated head against anything hard it may meet with, such as wood or plaster, thus giving rise to a ticking sound which might, by a good stretch of the imagination, be thought to sound like the ticking of a watch. The poor little beetle, when he causes the ticking, is only serenading his sweetheart. He can play no musical instrument to please her, and so, to prove his devotion, he butts his head against the wall.—Family Doctor.

Kept His Word.

An amusing tale is told in "Police Work From Within," by Hargrave L. Adam, of Charles Peace, the celebrated burglar. He once went into a chemist's shop smoking a choice cigar, which he had burgled in a recent "exploit:"

"The chemist, noticing the aroma of the cigar, remarked, 'That's a nice cigar you're smoking. Where did you get it?' Peace promptly replied, 'I stole it.' At this the chemist laughed and said, 'I wish you would steal some as good for me.' Again Peace promptly replied, 'I will.' Shortly after he again secured some good cigars upon the occasion of one of his nocturnal jobs, several of which he took to the chemist in question. As he handed them to him he remarked, 'There you are—I stole them for you.'"

The Insulted Tiger.

In "Tigerland" C. E. Gouldsberg, its author, alludes to the belief, current among some of the natives of Bengal, "that tigers resent being discussed by human beings and should one overhear a man doing so will not rest till it has killed and eaten the offender." Therefore when a tiger is near at hand they speak of it as a "geedur"—Bengali for jackal—and so hope to deceive it. When it was pointed out to an old native that to insult a tiger by calling it a jackal—the smallest and most insignificant beast in the forest—was scarcely the best way of propitiating it he merely shrugged his shoulders and said, "Kya jane?" (who knows?), adding by way of explanation that "such was their 'dustoor' (custom)."

THACKERAY'S KIND HEART.

The Author Was Called a Cynic, but He Loved Children.

Thackeray's words were satirical, and he himself was called a cynic, but the author of "Love Affairs of Some Famous Men" shows what sort of heart beat in the satirist's breast by quoting from the letter of one to whom the following incident happened:

"In the week following his death there appeared some genial memorial lines in the pages of Punch. Walking down the then unsavory thoroughfare known as Bedfordbury, my eye caught the open page of the popular periodical, and I stayed to read the graceful tribute to the dead moralist. Turning away at length, a poorly dressed man in working garb said to me:

"'I knew that man, sir.'

"'You knew Thackeray?' I asked.

"'Yes, sir. I keep that little baker's shop yonder,' pointing to the opposite side of the street, 'and many's the time Thackeray would come and buy a pound or two of cake of me. I cut it into slices for him, and then, distributing it among the crowd of hungry children, he would walk away and hide in that court over there, that he might have the pleasure of seeing their enjoyment. He didn't know I knew him, but I did. People used to call him a cynic, sir, but it wasn't true. He loved the children, sir, and no man is a cynic who does that.'"

THEY NEVER SEE SPOOKS.

That Is One Consolation That Color Blind Persons Have.

Are you afraid of the dark? There isn't a chance of you seeing a ghost if you are color blind, which may furnish you a ray of comfort for the beauties of landscape and floral decorations you may have missed during your lifetime. Dr. August Lummer, head of the physical institute of the University of Breslau, in Germany, is authority for this.

Dr. Lummer explains the phenomenon in this way:

"The normal eye has an arrangement of tiny rods and cones in the retina. The rods perceive light and the cones color. When a person with a normal eye tries to see in a half dark place the cones, which are useless, interfere with the effective action of the rods, and consequently the confusion creates the effect of apparitions that come and go and change their shapes.

"The color blind person lacks the cones, and his rods act with extraordinary efficiency in the dark. The color blind person sees a clear, permanent outline of things as long as there is the least amount of light present. That means that he never sees ghosts."—New York Herald.

Lexington Monuments.

All along the road to Lexington from Cambridge, Mass., in the United States of America, there are monuments to "rebel colonists" who slew British soldiers April 19, in 1775, but the most striking is that which is raised to the memory of Samuel Whittemore. He was eighty years of age at the time, and he killed three British soldiers with his own hand. The stone records that for this he received punishment of three kinds. He was shot, he was bayoneted and he was beaten. He was then, reasonably enough, left for dead. The old fellow must have had a magnificent constitution and a spirit which the most devoted optimist might envy. For the inscription goes on to say that he recovered and lived to the age of ninety-eight. 1695 must have been "a good vintage"—for men.—London Chronicle.

Their Passport.

A senator told at a luncheon in Washington a senate story.

"We'd be a hard lot, indeed, we senators," he said, "if we were as black as we're painted. I once heard a dreadful story against us.

"Two ladies, it appeared, came to the visitors' gallery and demanded admission, but they had no cards.

"'If you have no cards, ladies,' said the doorkeeper, 'perhaps you know one of the senators and can get a card from him.'

"'Oh, no, we don't know any senators,' they said hastily.

"The doorkeeper bowed low.

"'That, ladies,' he said, 'is very much to your credit. Pass right in.'"—Washington Star.

Why She Wept.

A young man who is very particular about his washing recently wrote a note to his washerwoman and one to his sweetheart and by strange fatality put the wrong address on each envelope and sent them off. The washerwoman was sent the invitation to take an auto ride the next day, but when the young lady read, "If you crumple my shirt bosom as you did last time I'll go somewhere else," she burst into tears and vowed she would never speak to him again.—Florida Times-Union.

FELINE FAMILY HISTORY.

Here Are the Facts, Although You May Not Believe Them.

Why shouldn't a respectable cat sit on the fence and howl when extracts from its family history read like this:

"Throughout the tertiary formations, from the upper eocene onward, there appears a remarkable family of cats, with a dentition still more specialized than that of the felinae, the true felines, retaining other skeletal features of a more primitive type of cats. These were the machaerodontinae, which survived until the pleistocene, both in Europe and in America."

The information was found in a geology student's paper, "The Evolution of the Domesticated Cat." Perhaps you are a little rusty on cat history and you find it difficult to remember. This illuminating bit of information will freshen it in your memory:

"The pliocene period was the period of the carnivora. The felids included the machserodonts, machaerodus and aelur opsis, besides varieties analagous to the leopard and lynx. In this epoch appeared the servals (Felis christoli). At the time of the Felis christoli there appeared also the European wild cat, Felis catus. The earliest feline in America was Felis billianus. It appeared in the middle pliocene."—Kansas Industrialist.

AN ENGINEERING FEAT.

Building a Railroad Across the Ice and Against Time.

Along the Copper river valley lies a standard gauge railroad, 191 miles in length, the building of which was filled with romance. Its construction is regarded as a distinct feat in world's engineering. The road crosses the river between two glaciers (Childs and Miles).

The false work of the bridge was laid on the ice in winter. Men were hired to work night and day. M. J. Heney, the contractor, the man who built another "impossible" road across the mountains from Skagway, and his chief engineer, E. C. Hawkins, conceived the idea of using the river ice for the bridge scaffolding.

As the spring approached hundreds of men were kept busy every minute of the day and night, for if not completed by the time the ice burst all the work and material would have been lost.

The ice went out, carrying the false work with it, less than an hour after the spike was driven in the connecting span and the work was completed. The bridge cost $1,400,000.—"Alaska, an Empire in the Making," by John J. Underwood.

At Sea In a Coffin.

It was the French assassin Lupi who escaped to sea from Cayenne in a coffin. He managed to get some nails, tar and cotton, and one dark night he got into the coffin shed. He selected a fine, stanch and seaworthy coffin and fastened the lid in order to turn it into a deck, leaving a cockpit sufficient to enable him to crawl in. He caulked all the joints as well as he could, and when this work was finished he made a pair of paddles out of two planks. Then he brought out his craft with great precaution. Without much difficulty he reached the water's edge. Silently and slowly he proceeded in the hope of reaching either Venezuela or British Guiana, 150 nautical miles distant. Fortunately or unfortunately for Lupi, the steamer Abeille, returning from the Antilles, off Paramaribo picked him up half drowned and almost in a fainting condition, and a few hours later he was in irons in his cell.

Licorice Root.

Very few people, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, have any idea where the familiar licorice root comes from. As a matter of fact, the bulk of it hails from Syria. Here it is gathered and piled into great stacks, where it remains until it is thoroughly dry. It is then taken to the factory to undergo certain processes. The finished product is used for flavoring confectionery and beer, as well as entering into the makeup of many brands of tobacco. Some idea of the extent of the industry may be gathered when it is stated that on the average 8,000 tons of dry licorice root is shipped from Aleppo annually, while Bagdad yields another 6,000 tons, Antioch 4,000 and Damascus 500 tons.

A Close Resemblance.

Professor Barry once amused Judge Ball by an application on behalf of a man who was a dealer in horses and sugar sticks. The incongruity of his avocation struck the judge, who remarked, "What a strange combination of trades!"

"I see a close resemblance between horses and sugar sticks," said the witty barrister.

"In what way?" inquired his lordship.

"The more you lick them the faster they go," was the reply.—London Tit-Bits.

SANCTUARY IN ENGLAND.

The Principle Still Survives to a Limited Degree.

Much water has flowed under London bridge since the British criminal could defy the strong arm of the law by the single expedient of escaping to the nearest church or hospital and claiming the protection of the "sanctuary," for down to the early Stuart days Great Britain had thousands of just such refuges for the criminal, from cathedrals and royal palaces to scores of towns and cities, where the man guilty of felony could laugh with impunity at the officers of law and justice for a period ranging up to forty days. If within that time he chose to go before the coroner, clothed in penitence and sackcloth, and confess his guilt, he was free to quit the realm without any hand daring to stay him.

Although no such asylum exists today for the criminal, the principle of the "sanctuary" still manages to survive. This privilege refers only to civil offenses and not to crimes as in the olden days, and yet the privileges are of considerable value.

No clergyman can be arrested within the walls of his church or while he is going to or returning from his duty. Bishops and archbishops are still more protected, for not one of them can be haled before a magistrate even though the cause is a crime, unless the king especially commands it. Nor even up to the present time has any warrant an effect within the precincts of any of the king's palaces.—Chicago Tribune.

COLORS OF THE SKY.

And Their Connection With Stormy or Sunshiny Weather.

In "Our Own Weather" Edwin C. Martin, after noting the indications of weather shown by barometric readings, the variations of the winds and their meaning, the ever changing forms of the clouds, shows how the colors of the sky act as weather signs:

Ordinary observation has gathered a great number of weather signs from simply the ever varying colors of the sky. Among the more familiar and reliable ones are:

A bright blue sky is the sky of fine weather.

A bright yellow sky at sunset promises winds, a pale yellow sky rain and a "sickly greenish" sky both wind and rain. A rosy sky at sunset promises fair weather, but a dark red sky at sunset promises rain. A red sky in the morning promises wind or rain. "A red sun has water in his eye."

"If the sun sets in dark, heavy clouds, expect rain the next day." Even a gray sunset indicates rain. But a gray morning indicates a fine day.

"When the sun draws water rain follows soon."

And, finally, what in this connection it would be perhaps the most reproachful of all possible omissions not to mention:

Rainbow at night,
Sailor's delight;
Rainbow in the morning,
Sailor's warning.

The Great White Shark.

The man eating fish par excellence is the great white shark. It is otherwise known by the name of man eater. Occasionally specimens are seen on both coasts of the United States, though its more customary habitat is in tropical waters. This frightful creature attains a length of nearly forty feet, and it is able to swallow a man whole. This fact is proved by an experiment which sailors are fond of making when such a shark is captured. The skull being preserved, they amuse themselves by crawling one after another through the distended jaws. It would be unsafe to do this, however, when the head has been freshly cut off, because under such conditions the jaws will snap together fiercely for some time afterward if anything is placed between them.

Legend of the Moss Rose.

A German tradition gives the origin of the moss rose as follows: An angel came to earth in mortal guise. He sought a place of shelter and repose after his labors of love, but every door was shut against the heavenly visitor. At length the angel, being very weary, sank upon the ground and over him a rosebush spread like a tent. It caught upon its outspread leaves the falling dew which would otherwise have drenched the messenger of love. Waking, the angel said to the rose:

Thou hast yielded the shelter that man denied:
A proof of my love shall with thee abide
And the green moss gathered about the stem
While the dewdrops shone like a diadem,
Crowning the blushing flower.

Naturally.

Illuminating Gas.

In 1792 a manumacturer of Redruth, in Cornwall, named Murdoch made gas to light his home and factory. Pall Mall, in London, 1807, was the first street to be lighted by gas. Philadelphia introduced it in 1815, Boston in 1822 and New York in 1825. Gas is obtained from coal, which is heated in large retorts. The heavy gas drawn off passes by a pipe, called the hydraulic main, through a number of curved pipes called condensers, in which process coal tar and ammoniacal liquor condense and fall into a well. The gas passes to purifiers over slaked lime, which takes up sulphureted hydrogen and carbonic acid. It is then headed downward to the gas holder, a large tank having its base resting on water and from which the gas is distributed to the consumers. Certain by-products are obtained in the course of manufacture which are more valuable than the gas itself. These include coke, ammonia, aniline, phenol or carbolic acid; naphthalene dyes, various artificial drugs and basic perfumes.—Christian Herald.

The Actor's Triumph.

In 1845 the Boulevarde du Temple was the heart of the theatrical world of Paris. In the ten theaters that lined that comparatively short thoroughfare so much blood was shed on the stage every evening at the popular plays that it was known as the Boulevarde du Crime.

The audience became so passionately devoted to some of the characters interpreted for their pleasure that they sometimes showed quite fierce hostility to the actors who had to take parts inimical to them. One night, for instance, Briand, who had represented Hudson Lowe in a scene on the island of St. Helena when Napoleon was imprisoned there, was seized by some roughs as he left the theater and flung into the basin of the Chateau d'Eau. This quite delighted him, and he gloated over it as a triumph when he was telling the tragic-comic incident the next day.—Bookman.

Making an Army Sword.

Army swords are tempered in oil. After the blade, pounded, rolled and hammered to the right length, is ground it is subjected to severe tests. The point is caught under a staple, and the blade is bent over a block of wood, making the arc of circle about thirty-five inches in diameter. It is then bent in the opposite direction. Afterward the blade is struck on an oak block and tested on sides and edges. Finally it is dipped in oil and bent. While it is bent the oil is wiped off. If the blade is cracked, even though the defects might be otherwise invisible to the eye, the oil in the minute crevices will be forced to the surface when the blade is straightened, and the defects will instantly be revealed by slight streaks of oil little wider than a hair.

A Good Word For the Salmon.

Salmon live and flourish only in the purest waters of the seven seas and in the clearest of the rivers that flow into them. They exercise the utmost care in choosing the places where they breed and feed. From the time of their birth to the day they are caught they live in surroundings that are as nearly perfect from a sanitary point of view as nature can make them, and from the time they are caught and packed until they are placed before human beings as food they are kept beyond all danger of contamination. Their meat has an attractive appearance, has a delicious flavor, is readily digestible and contains as much, if not more, of the elements that are required by the human system than other forms of meat.—Western Canner and Packer.

Mountain of the Sacred Footprint.

Adam's peak, or Mount Samanala, a rugged mountain in the island of Ceylon, is known throughout the orient as the "Mountain of the Sacred Footprint." In a flat, rocky basin at the foot of this mountain in stone as hard as blue granite there is the perfect imprint of a gigantic human foot, five and one-half feet long by two and one-half feet wide. The Ceylonese Brahmans have a legend to the effect that the imprint was made by Adam, our first parent, but the Buddhists declare that it could have been made by no one but Buddha.

Doctors Use This for Eczema

Dr. Evans, Ex-Commissioner of Health, says: "There is almost no relation between skin diseases and the blood." The skin must be cured through the skin. The germs must be washed out, and so salves have long ago been found worthless. The most advanced physicians of this country are now agreed on this, and are prescribing a wash of wintergreen, thymol and other ingredients for eczema and all other skin diseases. This compound is known as D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist writes: "I am convinced that the D.D.D. Prescription is as much a specific for eczema as quinine for malaria. I have been prescribing the D.D.D. remedy for years." It will take away the itch the instant you apply it.

In fact, we are so sure of what D.D.D. will do for you that we will be glad to let you have a $1 bottle on our guarantee that it will cost you nothing unless you find that it does the work.

He Explained Too Late.

Abe Attell added another scalp to his diamond belt recently which even the busiest prize-ring historians in New York not only failed to tell in full to an anxious American people but didn't even so much as mention. Let Abe tell about it himself as he related the story to the Hon. Bat Masterson and a reporter at Shanley's.

"I am sitting in John the Barber's being all primped up after a once over, a hair cut and a singe when into the drum blows another gentleman of my own race. The gent has a tray of jewelry he is selling and John the Barber steers him to my chair. I fall for a ring on the tray and the jewelry salesman, thinking I am an actor—which bee-lieve me, I ain't—is taking 10 per cent off and letting me have the ring for $100. And I tell him to wait till I see my wife and I'll be back in half an hour and buy the diamond hoop.

"Outside the shop, I meet a friend, who tells me something of a lot of private importance, and I rush downtown with this friend and forget all about the salesman and the ring. Three days later I am in John the Barber's again and I am just starting to take off my collar when up springs the gent that I had promised to buy the ring from but forgot.

"'You low life!' this gent I'm speaking about yells at me. 'I should wait here three whole days to be made a sucker by a loafer like you is it eh? I should lose three whole days of not selling jewelry! For this I give you a smack in the face.' And this party I'm conversing about takes a careful aim with his right mitt and winds up to lean his right against my map.

"A half hour is supposed to elapse. The party is now sitting sort of crumpled in a corner chair and John the Barber is trying to get back his own language after the short excitement. John is crying for more towels to try to stop the flow, for when this jewelry party began to windup, I am about decided to beat him to the punch in the interest of law and order. And from the time I start until I stop—one was a sufficiency—not a thing interferes except this party's countenance. Now let me tell you that this gent's opening remark is as he comes up for air. John the Barber has quieted enough to be able to tell the jewelry gent who I happen to be.

"'You great big chump,' John the Barber is explaining to this injured party, 'don't you know any better than to try to make a punch on this here little guest? He ain't no actor—he's a box fighter! Wake up! Listen! This little feller you set out to beat up is the champ box fighter Abe Attell!'

"The party who is bleeding sits up as straight and sudden as he can under the circumstances. He is gazing up at the face of John the Barber with a look that has more of sorrow than pity in it and he swallows hard once or twice.

"'Abe Attell is it, eh?' he is saying, talking thick like and shaking his head sorrowful. 'Vell, this is a hell of a time to tell me!'"

May Affect Country Hotels.

If the new women's employment law is enforced to the letter, the country hotel will be required to have a corps of waitresses for its "Sunday dinner" entirely different from those who serve the meals on week days. Hundreds of small hotels throughout the State, including many which have made a specialty of Sunday dinners for automobile parties and commercial men, will be affected by the new law, especially since it is the opinion of State officials that the law applies to hotel employes.

Under the new law a woman may not be employed more than six days a week, and a decision recently rendered by the Attorney General's department is to the effect that telephone operators may not be employed on Sundays, if they work on the other days of the week, even if the Sunday duty would be only a few hours in a rotation system.

NAPOLEON'S ARMY EAGLES.

They Were Patterned After the Ancient Symbol of the Caesars.

Eagles lasted only from 1805 to Waterloo. Before then it had been the custom in armies to carry huge unwieldy flags mounted on poles which, while they afforded a rallying point for their corps, also drew the enemy's fire. It remained for Napoleon to revive the ancient symbol of the Caesars.

At first an eagle was presented to every battalion of infantry and every squadron of horse. But owing to the number of eagles captured this allowance was cut down. All battalion eagles were withdrawn and one eagle was carried by each regiment of foot and cavalry. In 1812 a still further reduction was made and in some cases line regiments were ordered to leave their eagles in their arsenal. These standards were also taken from all regiments of light cavalry and one eagle sufficed occasionally for an infantry brigade.

The eagle itself was eight inches in height and nine inches across the wings. It stood on a brass block three inches square and weighed three and a half pounds.

Modern colors, cumbrous as they are, are as nothing compared to the old ones, which were as difficult to hide as the big drum. Thus there existed a regular system for saving eagles. Sometimes, when the tide of war ran adversely, they were unscrewed and put into haversacks or great coat pockets. At other times they were buried, thrown into ponds or rivers, broken up, hidden in hollow trees, and, most humiliating of all, stuffed into some dead horse, to be hauled out subsequently.—Harper's Weekly.

COULDN'T SEE THE JOKE.

Charles Sumner's Woeful Lack of a Sense of Humor.

It was a rainy afternoon, and Mr. Longfellow was obliged to go out, leaving Sumner stretched on the sofa reading Lowell's volume. When he returned he asked Sumner how he liked the poems, and Sumner replied: "They are admirable, very good indeed. But why does he spell his words so badly?" Longfellow said that he attempted to explain that the poems were purposely written in the New England dialect, but Sumner could not understand.

One summer at Nahant I dined at Mr. Longfellow's with Mr. Sumner and some others. Sumner was a collector of china, about which he knew a great deal, as he did about many other things. He told us a story about going to see Lord Exmouth's collection and how fine it was. When he was taking his leave Lord Exmouth gave him two rare plates and offered to send them to his lodgings, but Sumner would not be parted from his prize and insisted on taking them home with him in his cab. When he had concluded his story, which was interesting, but long in narration, Tom Appleton, Mr. Longfellow's brother-in-law, who was present, said, "A pleasing tale, illustrated with two plates." Everybody laughed, and Sumner, looking about most good naturedly, said: "What are you all laughing at? I suppose Appleton is up to some mischief, but my story is quite true."—From "Some Early Memories," by Senator H. C. Lodge, in Scribner's Magazine.

Removing Paint Stains.

Paint is one of the most usual of the unavoidable stains which afflict the skirt worn out of doors. "Fresh paint" signs are all very well if they are seen in time, but they have an inconvenient way of appearing boldly before the eyes after damage has been done. The sooner a paint stain is removed the easier the task of removal will be. Spread a little dry laundry or cornstarch around the spot to keep the paint when moistened from spreading. Then wet the stain with turpentine. After a few minutes moisten again. Scrape the paint up with a dull knife or a spoon handle and wet again with turpentine. When there is no trace left of the paint rub the spot dry with a clean cloth and brush off the starch. —Washington Star.

Traveling Sand Hills.

On the coast of Pomerania there are large tracts of sand heaped up by the wind, hundreds of yards in breadth and from 60 to 120 feet high, and these hills, propelled by the wind, move steadily in an easterly direction. The speed at which these great hills travel is from thirty-nine to fifty-six feet a year. Pine woods, which sometimes come in their line of march, cannot stop them and are completely destroyed. The branches are rotted off by the sand, and nothing is left of the tree but the bare stems, which after a few years wither and die.

Sicilian Carts.

Of all the vehicles in the world there is none to equal the Sicilian cart, carved, yellow, paneled with lurid paintings that run the gamut of myth and history. One we saw had upon its panels scenes that represented Columbus sailing from Palos and discovering America, a bloody fight round the citadel of Acre, the hermitage of Santa Rosalia, and on its tailboard a vivid picture of the massacre of the Vespers. The carts are never very large, as carts go, but they are so marvelously wrought that they ought surely to come under the provisions of the law that forbids the exportation of any works of art. Wheels, shafts, axles, the edges of sides and posts and tailboards are all worked into neat geometrical designs, and on the axle is a carving built up clear to the bottom of the cart, a mass of intricate scrollwork and gingerbread, in the middle of which sits the patron saint of the fortunate owner.—"Vistas in Sicily."

Sleep and Laughter.

People who sleep well quickly recover from an ailment, and for this reason, years ago, sleep was pronounced as one of nature's cures for all diseases. Experiments go to prove that a person who accustoms himself or herself to a full and regular sleep is not so liable to an attack of disease as the person who forgoes his proper rest. Moreover, when attacked by any ailment, a good sleeper recovers the quicker.

"Laugh and live" is a time honored saying, and a famous doctor once recommended one of his patients to try a course of funny stories. The patient, who was suffering from a nervous breakdown through overwork, obeyed the doctor's instructions, and the effect of hearty laughter soon brought him round. The menu recommended was one funny story at each meal with two extra at dinner.

Official Bread.

This is the way to make official bread, given out by the chief cook of the department of agriculture:

"For three pound loaves—make ferment of one ounce cake compressed yeast, one ounce granulated sugar, half ounce salt and twenty ounces water. Place in even temperature for an hour. Weigh four and one-half pounds flour and let it warm. Mix flour and ferment together. Cover mixture and warm for twenty minutes. If dough is too stiff add lukewarm water. After twenty minutes more take up dough with hands slightly greased and fold over and over fourteen times. Cover, set aside for twenty minutes; then fold nine times. After twenty minutes more mold into loaves and bake forty minutes in a steady oven 400 to 410 degrees F. A cup of water in the oven will make a tenderer crust."

How She Knew.

"I do think," exclaimed Mrs. Tolker indignantly, "that Mrs. Gadabout is the most aggravatingly inquisitive woman, if I must say so, I ever knew. Why, I never pass her on the street but what she invariably turns her head and stares back at me to see what I've got on and how it sits from behind."

"How—er—that is, I was wondering, my dear, how you found out that the mean thing looked back. Some one tell you?" inquired Mr. Tolker innocently.

And Mrs. Tolker straightaway turned the stream of her indignation, seething hot, from Mrs. Gadabout to her "insinuating wretch of a husband," as she fondly termed him, and after the first pyrotechnic outburst refused to speak to the fortunate man for the rest of the evening.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The Price of Peace.

She appeared to be somewhat excited when he came home that night, and he naturally asked the cause.

"The man in the top flat has fallen in love with our cook," she said.

"What of it?" he asked.

"He's been trying to get her to run away and marry him."

"Do you mean the man who practices on the cornet every night?"

She said she did, and he made a dive for his pocket.

"Tell the cook," he exclaimed excitedly, "that I'm a poor man, but I'll give $50 if she'll do it."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Not Qualified to Judge.

She was an excellent tennis player and could paddle a canoe most gracefully, but this was her first attendance at a horse show.

"Are you a good judge of horseflesh?" inquired one of her friends.

"Oh, I should say not. I never tasted any," she said.

The chicken wasn't killed and the dinner was a failure.

WALLIS—CONLEY

Elaborate Church Ceremony for Pretty Bellefonte Girl's Nuptials.

One of the prettiest and most elaborate weddings in Bellefonte for years past was that in St. John's Reformed church, at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, when Miss Nelle Meese Conley became the bride of Mr. William B. Wallis, of Crafton, a suburb of Pittsburgh. A reception and wedding supper followed at the home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. J. William Conley, after which Mr. and Mrs Wallis motored to Tyrone, where they boarded a train for their honeymoon tour.

A series of delightful social functions preceded Wednesday evening's ceremony at the church. These included a tea given by Miss Sarah Hastings and a luncheon by the bride-to-be for her attendants. St. John's church was resplendent in greens and foliage when the large throng of guests assembled shortly before 6 o'clock. Miss Marie Walsh presided at the pipe organ and while the bridal party assembled Miss Grace L. Jenkins, of Milton, sang "Because", by D'Hardelot. She has a rich, sweet voice and the number was a most pleasing one. As the organ took up the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the bridal party entered the church. First came the four bridesmaids, dressed in charmeuse, trimmed with tulle and rosebuds, wearing hats of tulle and carrying gold baskets of Killarney roses. They were Miss Elizabeth Baker, of Lewisburg; Miss Margaret Harbison, of Saltsburg; Miss Rebecca Jacobs, of Mifflintown, and Miss Caroline Poorman, of Tyrone. Next came the maid of honor, Miss Jean H. Wallis, a sister of the groom. She was dressed in lavender crepe dechine, trimmed with shadow lace and fur, wearing a picture hat and carrying lavender chrysanthemums.

Finally there came the bride, leaning on the arm of her father. She was charmingly dressed in white duchess satin and princess lace, with a long veil of tulle and princess lace. She carried a shower boquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The groom was attended by Dale R. Mason, of Pittsburgh, as best man, and his groomsmen were Lowry C. Barton, of Cincinnati; James B. Stephenson, of Crafton; Roger M. Evans, of Davis, West Virginia; Hugh M. Clark, of Pittsburgh, and Neil, M. Fleming, of Williamsport.

The pretty ring ceremony was observed, Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, pastor of the church, officiating. Smiling and happy the pretty young bride returned down the centre aisle on the arm of her husband, followed by her wedding party, and proceeded at once to the Conley home, where the reception was held.

Quite a number of out-of-town guests, including the parents of the groom and his grandmother, were present. Mrs. Wallis, the groom's mother, wore white crepe dechine, trimmed in American Beauty shades. The bride's mother, Mrs. J. William Conley, wore a dress of lavender brocaded satin, trimmed with point lace.

The groom's gift to the bride was a plantinum necklace set with diamonds and amethysts.

Following and extended bridal tour Mr. and Mrs. Wallis will reside at Bellevue.

Special Train Saturday.

On account of the Penn State Freshman—Academy football game on Saturday, the Bellefonte Central Railroad will run a special train leaving State College at 1.30 P. M., and returning will leave Bellefonte at 10 30 P. M.

Just when it was hoped that playing relations had been restored between the Bellefonte Academy and Kiskiminetas, after a lapse of six years, last Saturday's football game at Tyrone terminated in a manner unsatisfactory to both schools. The two elevens were evenly matched and a close and exciting game was played up to the last quarter. Kiskiminetas had scored twice, once on a field goal and again with a safety, making the tally 5—0 against the Academy. On an attempted kick one of the Kiskiminetas backs was tackled so quickly by an Academy man that he fumbled the ball. Another Academy man grabbed the ball and raced across the line for a touchdown, making the score 6—5, in favor of the Academy. The referee, a Pittsburgh official, then claimed that he had blown his whistle announcing the ball to be dead at the time of the fumble. It was the judgment of the large crowd present that he was in error in his decision. The Academy eleven also held to this view and refused to continue the game. Still unwilling to reverse his decision the official awarded the game to Kiskiminetas, 1—0, but the Academy claimed it, 6—5. Quite a number of admirers of the Academy eleven went up to Tyrone for the game.

The Tyrone "Herald", in its report of the game, which was entirely free from bias, declared that the large crowd repudiated the decision of the referee which brought the contest to such an unsatisfactory close. The "Herald" expained that the other officials of the game also declared the referee's decision to have been clearly in error. Headmaster J. R. Hughes made a proposition before the teams quit the field that would have solved the trouble had it been adopted. It was that the game be played to a finish and Kiskiminetas given the privilege later of formally protesting the disputed touchdown. It was only after this had been turned down that the Academy refused to continue the game.

HAD GREAT DAY.

Successful Exercises at Penn State College on Pennsylvania Day.

Successful as have been Pennsylvania Day celebrations at The Pennsylvania State College in years gone by, that last Friday surpassed all records. An enormous crowd was present, a matchless program of events was carried through to the letter and everybody fortunate enough to be there went home more than pleased with the day. Mirza Ali Kuli, Khan, Persian Minister to the United States, was the chief guest of the day, delivering the principal address at the morning exercises and capturing the admiration of the large and appreciative audience which thronged the Auditorium. The Persian Minister was introduced by Governor Tener, another distinguished visitor for the occasion, who explained that the eminent foreigner had married an American lady and was therefore half-American in his ideas, at least. The address by the Persian Minister was pronounced by all to be one of the finest ever heard at Penn State. His wonderful command of the English language, his perfect enunciation and the beautiful thoughts presented held the close attention of his audience from beginning to end.

The military review is always an interesting and spectacular card on Pennsylvania Day. Last Friday the College Cadets were reviewed by General Albert J. Logan, of Pittsburgh, the Persian Minister, Governor Tener, Speaker Alter, of the House at Harrisburg, and Dr. E. E. Sparks, president of Penn State, who personally supervised the arrangements for the day.

In the afternoon the Penn State football eleven lost a heart-breaking game to Notre Dame, 7--14, the contest being witnessed by perhaps the largest crowd that ever massed on new Beaver Field. Incidentally it marked the first defeat of a Penn State eleven on the new field. The visitors outclassed the Penn State eleven, proving to be a remarkably fast bunch of heavy players. On Thursday and Friday evenings numerous social functions were held at the several fraternity houses.
